agreed on, but, owing to differences of a local nature, will not be promulgated until after the meeting in Atlanta. It is certain, however, that the rates will be very close to those of last year, but with longer time allowed in New Orleans. One point settled is that exhibitors who desire to go before the excursion tickets are put on sale can do so by buying straight tickets, and taking a receipt from the ticket agent of the amount paid, and a memorand; of the amount paid, and a memorand; of the route traveled. Such an exhibitor will be returned, on the presentation of a certificate of the director general of the hister, and the payment to the ticket agent in New Orleans of the difference between the single-trip straight rate and whatever round trip excursion rates may be established. After settling this, the committee adjourned to meet in Atlanta yesterday.

"It results from the equitable doctrine of the conversion of partnership real estate into personalty, that the heir at law is bound by a judgment against the executor of a deceased partner upon a bill filed to subject the partnership land to the satisfaction of the judgment, and he cannot require the plaintiff to re-establish the debt unless by a direct proceeding the judgment is attached for some collusion or other fraud, accident or mistake sufficient to void it. Under the Tennessee code allowing a remedy at law against the execulowing a remedy at law against the executor of a deceased partner, and saving the surviving partners their rights and the surviving partners their rights and the partnership assets, as against the statute abolishing joint tenancies, the reconversion of the partnership land into realty, in favor of the heir at law, does not take place until the partnership is wound up and the surplus ascertained. It is only in the surplus that the heir has any beneficial interest, and he does not occupy, in reference to partnership lands, the same attitude he does as to other lands of his ancestor descended to him, in respect of the effect of a judgment against the executor or administrator of the decedent, as evidence against himthe decedent, as evidence against him-eif. These and children are his special care, and those who have watched, as the writer has for years, his solicitude for such as are placed which the plaintiff's son was a member, in his charge, even for a few hours, will bear testimony to his class but not obtrutes ive attention, and his delicate appreciation of their needs. We commend Gaston's highly.

The bank is not liable for their value to the principal, unless it had notice of a revocation of the agent's authority, or unless it had not only a knowledge of the fact that the agent way about to make that use of the fund, but also of the further fact that such use was without authority of the that such use was without authority of the principal and a breach of his trust. Where the agent having for a time a special deposit in his own name as agent, asked the bank for a receipt, showing that act, and which he or the bank sent to the principal, without any knowledge by the bank that the principal intended to revoke the agency, and when the principal con-inued to deal with the agent in relation o this fund, and did not at all communiate with the bank for a long time after he receipt was given, there was no change of the contract for bailment from one with the agent to one with the principal. FROM THE PEOPLE.

To the Editors of the Appeal:

See here! I appeal from your judgment upon the depravity of women. My mother was a woman, and I cannot stand idly by and hear the thwack of the flail which pounds a sex to which I am so nearly related. With but the mere fragment of a proof, your article sets forth the facts of several cases of a wful depravity. If I ever read about similar instances of crime I am glad I have forgotten them, but I certainly have. Suppose such cases where women have, in a horrible manner, killed their newly-wedded husbands, or even their old besotted, brutal and beastly husbands, from partial insanity, or even from wicked and unfaithful motives, to the number of and unfaithful motives, to the number of 100 within the past balf century in this country—how many do you suppose of that sort of husbands have, in every pos-sible beastly manner killed their pure, faithful and feart-broken wives? Maybe 1,000,000 Crime of all kinds, seemingly, Did gold and silver taken as is stalking ruthlessly through the world at ELIAS HOTCHKISS... I will not be responsible for or pay any debts contracted by Maggie Cobb in mine coast.

present, or, it may be, newsy newspapers, able to get at facts connected with crime easier, give them wider distribution. Hence there appears more everywhere than formerly. It is a sate statement that when a woman murders her hu-band a man will commonly be uncovered as a party to, if not the cause. In your hastily written judgment, from which this appeal is taken, I think you inadvertantly forget to say this, for it goes without your saying it, or being said, that the women have found, and find in you, a steady desfender. Therefore it seems to me no rule is established, should but one per cent, or two per cent, of these blood-cardling murders fall to the hand of women in a given period.

May I mention one remarkable exhibit may be at the fall to the hand of women in a given by the fall to th
